ANOTHER CONTINGENT OF AMERICAN TROOPS LANDED SAFELY AT EUROPEAN PORT

"Are We Downhearted?" is the Shout of Sammies as They Disembark and "No" is the Roaring Answer; Few Spectators on Hand for Few Knew of Soldiers' Arrival; Those on Hand Cheer Lustily and Troops Cheer Back.

ENTRAIN FOR U. S. CAMP IN A SHORT TIME

By Associated Press.

A EUROPEAN PORT, July 28.—Another American contingent has safely arrived and disembarked.

The American troops arrived by the same steamer whereon Kermit Roosevelt, his wife and child, traveled.

When tenders went alongside the vessel Friday the men were in high spirits and frequently shouted:

"Are we downhearted?" which was answered with a roaring "No," given with great enthusiasm.

Representatives of the general staff watched the disembarkation. There was no civil demonstration. Only a few spectators knew of the landing. These cheered and the troops cheered back.

The men entrained quickly and left for their new quarters.

A signal company remained at the port for some hours and these were the only representatives of the contingent which the public saw.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The government withholds information or comment on the foregoing dispatch.

A. P. REFUSES TO KILL STORY OF TROOPS' ARRIVAL

WASHINGTON, July 28.—At 9.40 o'clock this morning, five hours after its receipt, the Associated press received from the committee on public information a request to kill the dispatch from a European port announcing the safe arrival of another contingent of American troops.

The Associated Press saw no reason for killing the dispatch, inasmuch as it disclosed no military information of a character to disclose the location or description of the troops and, furthermore, the dispatch had been passed through the official censorship in Europe.

PLATTSBURG OFFICERS SHOW UP WELL IN FRANCE

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, Friday, July 27.—The hard training which the American troops are now undergoing is bringing out a marked degree of efficiency in officers who recently joined the army after undergoing training at Plattsburg or at other camps. Regular army officers are particularly struck by the enthusiasm with which these men have plunged into their work. They declare that the quality of these men sets at rest any doubt of the high standard of leadership in America's vast new army.

The young officers have adapted themselves very quickly to their positions. They met here in training with French instructors and seem to appreciate fully the most minute details. They are exceedingly in earnest in their work and never tire. They have won united praise from older officers who have seen long years of service. The colonel of one of the old line American regiments standing today watching the work of one of his battalions in which many reserve officers are serving, exclaimed:

"They are simply splendid. I cannot say enough about them. I have never seen a finer class of young officers anywhere. With very little preliminary guidance they have shown themselves capable of taking over entire direction of the battalion. They have brought to their work not only much of the technique of professional soldiers but the high moral and enthusiasm of men who have been attached to military service by natural inclination.

GOVERNMENT NEEDS SEVEN BILLIONS ADDITIONAL

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Congress faces the task of raising $7,000,000,000 of additional revenue needed to run the government during the coming year. This enormous sum is called for in estimates furnished by Secretary McAdoo, putting the cost of the war for the year at $10,735,897,000, exclusive of loans to the Allies.

Should extensions of credit to the Allies be continued at the rate now prevailing $4,500,000,000 of new revenue would be required, bringing the grand total of war expenditures up to more than $15,000,000,000

RED CROSS NEEDS TRUCK DRIVERS AND MACHINISTS.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Twenty experienced motor truck drivers, 20 helpers and 10 expert mechanics are needed at once by the American Red Cross for service in France, according to a cabled request just received by the Red Cross War Council from Major Grayson M. P. Murphy, in charge of the Red Cross mission to France.

The mechanical squad will include master carpenters, body builders, painters, machinists and electricians—two each. The trucks for which drivers are sought are of the two-ton capacity and will be used in the rapid transfer of Red Cross supplies from seaports to their destinations, a service made necessary by the congested condition of the railroads in France.

Volunteers beyond military age have been asked for this service by the American Red Cross to work without compensation. The Red Cross will pay the transportation and living expenses of the men while abroad. It is the intention when the men are recruited to give them intensive mechanical training, some drill and if possible some preliminary instruction in the French language.

GERMAN WOMEN ARE FIGHTING IN TRENCHES

PETROGRAD, July 28.—When the Russian women's battalion known officially as the "Command of Death" went into action against the Germans near Smorgon, they captured a number of women, from whom it was learned for the first time that German women also were fighting on the battle front in western Russia.

Ten wounded heroines of the women's battalion arrived here today leaving their commander, Vera Butchkareff, and Maryn Skrydloff, a daughter of Admiral Skrydloff, formerly commander of the Baltic fleet and minister of marine, in a hospital at Vitebsk.

Interviewed, the women said it was reported that of the 200 of the command who reached the front, only 50

LAD KIDNAPED LAST OCTOBER ELUDES HIS CAPTOR; RETURNS HOME

Earl Imhoff, 13 Year Old Meyersdale Boy, Back After Many Exciting Adventures.

Missing from his home since October 18, 1916, Earl Imhoff, the 13 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Imhoff of Meyersdale, after many strange adventures, eluded the man by whom he was kidnaped and returned to his home last evening. The boy's parents had given up all hopes of ever seeing their son again, believing him dead. Hundreds of people flocked to the Imhoff home to hear the lad relate his strange adventure and as he told his many friends how glad he was to be home again the boy broke down in tears.

The lad tells a thrilling story of his visits to all the principal cities in the United States, with a man who kidnaped him from his home. According to his story, he has traveled from coast to coast and worked at various occupations, but never was allowed to enjoy the money that he earned. He says the man with whom he traveled always went by the name of "McManigan," but he has never been able to learn his right name. According to Imhoff, the man kidnaped a number of boys while he was with him; the man never traveled on a railroad train and had never been arrested. He always locates in a small town where he secures employment for the boys and lives off their wages. When young Imhoff made his escape he was working with McManigan on the Cohill orchards near Hancock, Md. While at the Baltimore & Ohio station he met Clay Donges, a traveling salesman, whose home is in Meyersdale. The lad knew Mr. Donges and inquired about his parents, and how far it was to Meyersdale. He later went back to the orchards, secured his money at the office, returned to Hancock and boarded a train for Meyersdale, arriving there shortly after 5 o'clock. The police of Meyersdale and surrounding towns were notified and are in search of McManigan.

FRANCE BEGINS THE WAR'S FOURTH YEAR IN CALM CONFIDENCE

Premier Ribot Says Entrance of U. S. Encouraged the Allied Peoples.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, July 28.—France begins the fourth year of the war in calm confidence and determination, expressed today by Premier Alexandre F. Ribot in these words:

"Until the people with whom we are at war finally awaken and free themselves from the detestable regime that oppresses them, nothing will stop the Allies in their effort that will bring back peace to the world by the triumph of their arms."

At the request of The Associated Press, the Premier wrote:

"The entry of the United States into the conflict that is pending in the world was the capital event of the third year of the war. It was welcomed with enthusiasm by the allied peoples. They know what may be the effort of the American soldiers who have come to fight by their side.

"That event resounded mightily throughout the entire world. Certain Latin-American states where France received touching marks of sympathy on the day that they had a clear vision of the Germanic peril.

"Greece, wrenched from the intrigues of a foreign faction, is preparing to send fresh contingents to fight with us on the Macedonian front. The cause of national liberty in all countries is finding more ardent advocates who are heard with increasing attention.

"The enemy, disappointed in his insensate hope of stopping ocean navigation, disillusioned in his effort to sap the courage of the Allies by false offers of peace, can do no more than to seek to envelop the origins of his criminal enterprise in a veil of untruth.

"May the peoples with whom we are at war finally awaken and free themselves from the detestable regime that oppresses them. Until then nothing will stop the Allies in their effort that will bring back peace to the world by triumph of their arms."

NO CUT IS MADE

Connellsville's Cottage State hospital appropriation of $23,250 was yesterday approved by Governor M. G. Brumbaugh at Harrisburg. It is one of the very few hospitals getting the entire amount sanctioned by the legislature, the governor lopping off small sums on the bills of the other state institutions.

The Uniontown and Brownsville hospitals were cut down $5,000 from the appropriations. The former will get $15,000, while the appropriation was $48,000. The latter will get $23,000, while the appropriation for it was $28,000.

Other appropriations and amounts approved are:

Waynesburg hospital—appropriation, $6,000, approved; Charleroi-Monessen hospital—appropriation $6,000, approved, $5,500; Latrobe hospital—appropriation, $10,000, approved; Westmoreland County Children's Aid society—appropriation, $9,000, approved, $8,000; Mount Pleasant Memorial hospital—appropriation, $25,000, approved, $25,000.

MAKE DRAFT LIST PENDING RECEIPT OF MASTER NUMBERS

Assuming 251 To Be Quota, District No. 2 Will Call 502 Men First.

PRESENT BOARD AT WORK

Though they have not yet received a master list of the draft numbers as drawn at Washington, and though handicapped by not knowing who the successors of Dr. D. D. Brooks and F. D. Munson on the Second district board are to be, nor where the new headquarters will be located, the present board members went to work this morning preparing a list of the men who are to be called out.

Another day went by yesterday without any official orders being received here. Mr. Munson and Dr. Brooks have not even received notice, as yet, that they are to be removed from the board because they are between registration ages. There have been no orders to call up the men for examination, no notice of successors to these two members of the board, no master lists. Not even notification of the correct official quota for this district has arrived.

Taking, however, newspaper reports of the quota of 251 as correct, the officials are preparing for the calling out of 502 men. With a master list furnished by a newspaper, they are preparing a list of the men to be called and their addresses. No attempts are being made to fill out the notification blanks, since it is impossible to tell the men where to report. The headquarters must be changed from Attorney Fred Munson's office when he and Dr. Brooks are succeeded by older men. Some of the boards are preparing their notification blanks and will check up with the master lists when they arrive but that course is impossible here. The work will be carried along, however, as far as possible, by the present officials, and the new members of the board will find all details arranged when they step into office.

All 502 men called in this district will not be examined in three days, Dr. Brooks said this morning, though they will be divided into thirds and ordered to report on the fifth, sixth and seventh days, respectively, after the mailing of the notices. A doctor will be doing wonderful work, Dr. Brooks said, if he can examine 40 men in a day, and the entire batch will probably be strung out for nearly two weeks. In some of the large districts there are a number of examining physicians, one testing hearing, another eyesight, another bones or skin, and so on. In this way the ranks are quickly run through. Here, however, there will be only one examining physician, and one other to go over the men rejected.

SEARCH FOR HARRY SHAFFER FINDS HIM IN CITY HOSPITAL

Local Salesman Stricken With Apoplexy While on Business Trip to Pittsburg.

Stricken with apoplexy in Pittsburg Wednesday, Harry B. Shaffer of Lincoln avenue, about 50 years old, is in the Allegheny hospital, Pittsburg, in a critical condition. Mr. Shaffer went to Pittsburg Wednesday morning expecting to return home the same evening. When he failed to arrive that night or the following morning, members of the family became alarmed and efforts to locate him were made. Two brothers, Morris Shaffer, and another one residing in Greensburg, went to Pittsburg Thursday and after a long search, it was learned that he was in the Allegheny General hospital. Mr. Shaffer was stricken on the street Wednesday afternoon about 5 o'clock and was taken to the Pittsburg police station where he was kept until the following afternoon at 3 o'clock.

His whereabouts were discovered at the police station by a Mr. Worthington of Greensburg, a relative of the Shaffer family. In the meantime the relatives had called both the hospital and the police station and authorities stated they had received no patient by the name of Shaffer. Rev. J. L. Proudfit, accompanied by Mrs. Shaffer, went to the hospital yesterday and while the sick man recognized his wife he was unable to talk. It is feared his illness will prove fatal. Mr. Shaffer is a traveling salesman and is well known in Connellsville and vicinity.

GETS A DUCKING

"Jack" Marsh Dives Into Dam When Motorboat Hits Rock.

W. R. Hammer, "Jack" Marsh and a man named Hatch, all employed at the United States Electric Steel Company's plant, were coming across the West Penn dam in a motorboat last evening when the craft struck some obstruction as it neared the east bank. Marsh, who was standing up in the boat, preparing to land, was precipitated into the water and he emerged a sorry spectacle.

According to his friends, Mr. Marsh always is very careful to clean up and make himself very presentable before he leaves the plant after work, a fact which made his impromptu ducking all the funnier—to his companions.

Arriving home, wringing wet and with his trousers much lacerated, Mrs. Marsh asked her husband what had happened. In fun, he remarked that he had jumped in the dam to save some boys from drowning. Suspecting that this was a "fish tale," Mrs. Marsh made a little investigation on her own book and the truth came out.

Another Big War Loan.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The addition of $7,000,000,000 in this year's war expenditures will probably be met by imposing taxes to raise $2,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000 in war credits.

PATRIOTIC THRILLS MARK THE PRESENTATION OF $1,800 FUND TO CONNELLSVILLE'S SOLDIERS

Money Subscribed by Friends and Relatives Throughout County Turned Over to Captain R. S. Morton by Captain John L. Gans; Informal Ceremony at Armory Follows Parade; Veterans of Civil War Give Advice to Guardsmen.

RIFLE CLUB GIVES WATCH TO CAPTAIN MORTON

After the street parade and demonstration at the armory last night, members of Company D and the Tenth Regiment Hospital Corps have no doubt that as they go to the fighting front the folks back home have their interest very close to their hearts and are confident that local soldiers will do their duty at all times and come home covered with glory.

Standing on the armory steps, with clergymen of the city and former company commanders about him, with Civil War veterans seated on the pavement below, with lines of khaki-clad members of Company D and the Hospital Corps standing at rest in the street, and with other civilian organizations and citizens in the background, Captain John L. Gans, a former captain of Company D, presented to Captain R. S. Morton, its present commander, a fund of $1,800 raised in Connellsville, Uniontown and various other sections of Fayette county, for the purpose of supplying the boys with certain necessities which can be provided for in no other way when in active service. The presentation was attended by no great ceremony but it was mighty effective and the scene in the vicinity of the armory was surely picturesque while the brief exercises were on. Then later, when the veterans of '61 bade God speed and gave kindly advice out of their own experience, the occasion had genuine patriotic thrills.

The parade which preceded the presentation was the last in which the boys are likely to participate for some time, and crowds of people lined the streets to see them go by. Both Company D and the Hospital Corps were out in full strength and they made a fine appearance, swinging along in regular formation.

There was found after round of applause for them all along the route, and especially at the places where the crowds were massed, on the Library and high school lawns, at Brimstone Corner, on the Presbyterian church steps, and at the armory.

In addition to the soldiers there were a number of other organizations in the parade, which was really an excellent one, considering the short time in which it was arranged.

Captain John L. Gans, on behalf of The Courier, the Uniontown Herald, the Connellsville Rifle Club, and all who had aided in securing of subscriptions or had contributed, turned over a check to Captain Morton. The fund then amounted to $1,736.43. The amount, he said, would likely be raised to $1,800.00 before the boys left, and some additions to the fund have been made this morning.

Captain Morton accepted the money from Captain Gans, and spoke briefly, thanking all who had contributed to the fund. The money would not be used for luxuries, he promised, but for actual needs of the men which could not be supplied in any other way. The captain said he was proud of the opportunity of marching behind the veterans of '61 and '98.

E. T. Norton was chairman of the meeting, and after the Connellsville Military Band had played "America," and the presentation had been made, he introduced Rev. E. B. Burgess, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church, one of the first churches to contribute to the fund. Rev. Burgess told the boys that they were going to have some hard times during the war, and that it would be a test of manhood for all of them. He read a little poem which expressed his sentiments concerning the test of courage which will be put up to every one in the command.

Out of a full experience, two veterans of the Civil War, Captain Edmund Dunn and Colonel J. J. Barnhart, gave some good advice to the boys. Captain Dunn declared that with 180 such men as are represented in Company D and the Hospital Corps, he could "break down any line that the Army of Northern Virginia ever built up."

"You're going to get awfully homesick," he told the boys, "but just take a good cry—bawl away—and get it over with. Every one of us Civil War veterans here were under 21 when we enlisted and you know we were homesick, too."

He had two pieces of advice for them. "Be obedient," he said, "Obey your officers always. You must realize that they're your best friends. Obedience is the greatest thing in army life. And then shoot to k—— to hit the target. Don't waste any ammunition. And don't get sentimental and spare a man just to spare life, because if you do, he'll get you."

Colonel "Sunny Jim's" speech was full of optimism. "Don't get the idea that you're not coming back, because you are," he said. "And when you come, we'll be waiting for you, with open arms. We'll be at the station, or at Pittsburg, or at the coast, somewhere, to meet you. We're with you all the time."

Colonel Barnhart insisted that the boys should honor the flag, the greatest flag of all, the flag which is to establish democracy and humanity throughout the world. "I want to see you all come back," he said, "but I'd rather have you all killed than come back with the flag trampled and torn and dishonored."

Colonel Barnhart mentioned some of his own experiences in the Civil War, and emphasized what Captain Dunn had said about obedience. "God bless you," he concluded, "and send you all safe home."

Paul McDonald, representing the Trades & Labor Council, told the boys that all union men had one favor to ask of them. "The Kaiser don't care a thing about unions," he said, "and we want you each to appoint yourself a committee of one to do all you can toward fulfilling our request: We want you to get the Kaiser and tie the can to him."

Chairman Norton told the boys that, whenever tired, unfortunate, or hurt, to think that these things were what were naturally coming to them in life, and that anything else "just happened." Andy George, Moose dictator, was to have spoken, but he sent a telegram of regrets, being at Pittsburg attending the Moose convention.

The band played "The Marseillaise" and Lester Crawford sang, "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," and "America, Here's My Boy." During the singing of the latter, a Boy Scout, carrying a big flag, mounted the steps and stood beside the soloist.

Immediately following the outdoor exercises, members of the Rifle Club, in the captain's office at the armory, presented Captain Morton with a $25 officer's wrist watch. Harry Cook, who made the presentation speech, said that the gift was in token of the club's appreciation of his courtesy in allowing them the use of the armory and of the company arms.

The parade formed on Pittsburg and Fayette streets and moved shortly before 8 o'clock. At the head were Chief of Police E. Rottler, and Patrolman John Barnes on two magnificent horses, which Barnes recently purchased from the stranded Coop & Lent circus. The animals were constantly shying at the music or trying to keep step to it, and the two cops, reining them in, made gallant figures.

The Connellsville Military band followed. Throughout the line of march, they played and sang "America, Here's My Boy." An automobile contained Mayor R. Marietta and Councilmen John Duggan and L. L. West. Councilman M. B. Pryce marched in the ranks of the Rifle Club.

Nine Civil War veterans followed, Among them W. P. Clark, E. Dunn, J. J. Barnhart, C. H. Whiteley, H. Kurtz, A. S. Haddock, W. H. Shaw, and J. A. Mason. Captain Gans, Captain Harry Dunn, Captain A. R. Kidd, and Captain J. C. Herwick, all former commanders of Company D, were next. Then came Company D and the Hospital Corps, and the Rifle club. The West Side volunteer firemen had a good turnout. The Boy Scouts fell in line at Peach street, where they had formed. The hook and ladder truck brought up the rear.

Marching with the band were Edgar Horner, now bugler in Company D, and V. Hugo Mulac, now of the Tenth Regiment band, both former members of the local band. Both were in their guard uniforms.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO NOON RAISE FUND TO $1,794.43

Additions to the fund received during last night and this morning brought the total to $1,794.43, and it seems certain that this will be raised to more than $1,800. There are 184 enlisted men in Company D and the Hospital Corps now and this sum will give an average of nearly $10 for each of them.

In addition to contributions which have already been acknowledged the following were received during and after the exercises last evening:

West Penn Power Plant Employes, through P. R. Bremner, master mechanic, member of R. E. Grim's team	$35.00
Collections by A. W. Bishop	3.00
Collected by A. B. Kurtz	1.00
W. S. Bohanna	1.00
Mrs. C. R. Berkey	1.00
Miss Winnie Tipping	1.00
Boy Scouts, Troop No. 1	5.00
Paul G. Wagoner	5.00
A. E. Wagoner	5.00
D. F. Lepley	1.00

Several subscriptions are yet to be turned in which will no doubt make the fund somewhat more than $1,800.00. The names of subscribers secured by several of the Rifle Club teams will be published later.

remain. Twenty were killed, eight were taken prisoner and all the rest were wounded.

"Several times," declared one wounded girl, "we attacked the Germans. Especially memorable was our attack at Novospassky wood near Smorgon, where the enemy, hearing the voices of girls, lost their nerve. The result was that many of them were killed, wounded or taken prisoner. Among the prisoners were a few women from whom we learned for the first time that German women also were fighting.

"We did not feel the slightest fear for our own personal safety. Our passion was to serve the Fatherland. We advanced gaily against the foe with laughter and song, our only unpleasant sentiment being when we first came to the corpses. Once, when replying to the enemy's severe rifle and machine fire, we discovered to our amazement that all our men comrades had treacherously fled, leaving us—a handful of women—to face the enemy alone."

FRENCH FINANCES UNSHAKEN AFTER THREE YEARS OF WAR

PARIS, July 28.—French finances have been unshaken by the war in the opinion expressed to the Associated Press by Charles Gide, of the University of Paris, an eminent authority on economic questions, discussing the outlook at the beginning of the fourth year of the conflict.

"France," said M. Gide, "has spent about 70,000,000,000 on three years of military effort. Yet in the 36th month of hostilities, the French people are investing in short term treasury bonds as freely as they were two years ago, that is, at the rate of about 1,000,000,000 a month."

As evidence of the excellence of French credit, M. Gide pointed to the co-operation of the United States which, he said, "brings formidable aid to France and her allies. This," he continued, "not only removes all doubt concerning the result of the war from a military standpoint, but relieves the financial situation by diminishing the drain upon French gold.

"The money which France has spent to sustain her military effort inside the country swells the figures of her outlay to immense proportions, but this outlay cannot be considered a dead loss except in such proportion as is spent for steel, explosives, and other material made to be destroyed. Increased prices paid for every commodity, it must be remembered also, has vastly increased the revenues of the French people. Before the war these revenues were 30,000,000,000 to 35,000,000,000 francs. Now they are 50,000,000,000 francs annually. These figures show that, formidable as the war debt may appear at first sight, the problem of its liquidation is not so alarming after all."

GERMANS LOOT AND SINK AMERICAN BARK

PLYMOUTH, England, July 28.—The American bark Carmela, of 1,379 tons has been sunk by a submarine. The crew landed safely.

All the members of the bark's crew, which numbered 20 men, were uninjured. They will be sent to New York.

The Carmela was attacked at 6 o'clock this morning by a German submarine of small type. The undersea boat fired four shots at her and the crew then took to their boats.

The submarine ordered the boat's crew to go aboard the submarine and, placing an armed guard over them, used the boats to loot the ship's stores of coffee and bacon. At the end of the second trip the Germans were interrupted at the approach of patrol vessels which rescued the bark's crew.

FIGHT FOR YOUR LIFE

Duty Demands Robust Health

Fight to get it and keep it

Fight—fight day in and day out to prevent being overtaken by ills and ails. Keep wrinkles from marring the cheek and the body from losing its youthful appearance and buoyancy. Fight when ill-health is coming with its pallor and pains, defects and declining powers. Fight to stay its course and drive it off.

But fight intelligently. Don't fight without weapons that can win the day for without the intelligent use of effective weapons the pallor spreads and weakness grows and a seemingly strong man or woman oftimes becomes a prey to ills after all.

You will not find this class of persons in the hypoferrin ranks. No unhealthy, dull, draggy, droopy persons in that line. It is a hale, hearty, robust aggregation of quick-steppers who view life in a joyous frame of mind and are mentally and physically equal to any emergency. Hypoferrin stands for sound body and sound mind—it is the invigorating tonic of the times—powerful and unsurpassed as a health restorer, vitalizer and health preserver. Fight to hold the vigor of a sound body with hypoferrin or to stay the process of decay and restore health and strength—you win. This tonic of amazing, wonder-working properties has been approved by physicians as a restorer and safeguard of health. It is a thoroughly scientific preparation of the very elements necessary to tone up the stomach and nerves, to build strong, vital tissue, make pure blood, firm flesh and solid, active, tireless muscles.

Hypoferrin contains those mighty strength-producing agents, lecithin-and-iron peptonate, in a form best adapted to benefit the body and its organs. Its ingredients are absolutely necessary to the blood. In nine cases out of ten a run-down condition, sallow, pale complexions that "all in" feeling and frail bodies are due to lack of lecithin-and-iron peptonate in the system.

Your mental and physical strength and endurance depends upon a lecithin-and-iron peptonate laden blood; steady, dependable nerves and a healthy stomach. With these you can meet life at any angle.

This wonder tonic, hypoferrin, which is as perfect as science can get to nature, meets every essential demand of the human organism. It is safe and sure and a boon to run-down, worn-out men and women. Hypoferrin means nature's own way of bringing color to the cheeks, strength to the body and keeping the vigor and buoyancy of youth. The powder and paint way of effecting beauty is not needed by hypoferrin women and girls. Their blood, filled with nature's beauty stores, creates conditions that give firmness and grace to the body and the glow of health to the cheeks.

No need of going through life sickly and always feeling miserable in this age of medical science. Join the hypoferrin ranks. It puts into you the springy snap and vigor you ought to have and put life into your body and mind that inspires the confidence that you confront the world on an equal footing with anyone.

Hypoferrin may be had at your druggist's or direct from us for $5.00 per package. It is well worth the price. The J. Remedies Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

At the Theatres

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE SAWDUST RING."—A five act circus picture produced by Triangle-Ince, with Bessie Love, the charming screen star, in the leading role, is today's feature attraction. The picture is a series of human adventures and is one of the best ever produced by Triangle. There is a good deal of humor of the highest sort. Bessie Love as Janet, the little girl, gives a most realistic performance and Harold Goodwin as the boy, is given an excellent opportunity to display his dramatic abilities. Janet after her mother has been taken to the hospital runs away with Peter Weldon, a boy of the village. Their ambition is to join a circus and after many peculiar experiences they do, and the owner of the show, Col. Simmons, proves to be Janet's father, separated from his wife years ago as the result of some misunderstanding. A happy reconciliation follows. A two reel comedy is included. Monday Harold Lockwood will appear in "The Haunted Pajamas," a five part Metro feature. Wednesday Dorothy Dalton will be seen in "The Flame of Yukon." Thursday's attraction is Marguerite Clark in "Still Waters," a five part Paramount feature.

SOISSON THEATRE.

In spite of the many counter attractives, the Soisson Theatre played to three large houses yesterday and the patrons were more than pleased with the big vaudeville show which was offered. The bill consists of six acts, and is the essence of variety. Juggling Miller is in a class by himself and performs many difficult and dexterous tricks. Ola Edebarn, the pretty little dancer, was seen here the first of the week and repeats her former success. Jack Linn offers a number of songs displaying a pleasing voice. Bonner and La Croix have a "black face" specialty including singing, dancing and instrumental selections that was much enjoyed. La Vine and Jaffey in their planologue and songs and dancing also scored a big hit with their audiences. The "Three Jolly Sailors" also held over from the first half, at the request of many patrons, again received much applause for their unusually fine harmony singing. James and Ferdinand are acrobats, performing some of the most sensational and daring feats which are seldom seen outside of the large circuses. This programme will be repeated for the balance of the week and to anyone enjoying a first class show in every particular, this opportunity should not be missed. The management has secured one of the best musical tabloid companies on the road for next week, and a good show is guaranteed to all patrons.

THE ARCADE.

Running over with new jokes Bolke's Footlight Rambler Girls at the Arcade yesterday presented a mighty funny show. Billy Wallace and Harry Levin are comedians par excellence and their funnyisms are not only new but original. This is especially true of the war news jokes and some of them were thought out by Mr. Wallace while with the English army. The real big number of the show is the novelty specialty in which every member of the company does a vaudeville act. Miss Silver does a genuine novelty, an imitation of a Hawaiian ukelele and does it solely with her voice. As a matter of fact the sound she produces is far more musical than the noise from the south sea island three stringed guitar. Marguerite Aggie does a good eccentric dance. Miss Decker does a fancy dance that is fine and Miss Miller sings a pretty ragtime song. Miss Bolke gives a travesty upon Eva Tanguay impersonators and Miss Dorsay sings, "More Lonesome Than You." Mr. Wallace sings a song written by himself, "The City of Booze," and it is a very clever bit of ragtime. The show is full of laughs which are not only written in the script but many of them are created by these clever, funny men. Next week comes Hoyt & Adams Musical comedy with Hal Hoyt and Miss Ann Stein as the stars. This company holds the attendance record at the Arcade theatre two years ago in "The Red Raven." On Monday and Tuesday they will play "Miss Million Dollars," Wednesday, "All Aboard," and Thursday, "The Devil's Revue." Each show is a complete production, with original book, songs and dances. The books were written by Mr. Hoyt who is the author of a number of musical and farce comedies. He is favorably known to many theatre goers in the coke region who will be delighted to hear of his return engagement.

ORPHEUM THEATRE.

"RAGS."—A five reel drama, featuring the spirit of the screen, Mary Pickford, will be shown today. "Little Mary" herself is the crowning glory of the subject and the manner in which she illustrates her emergence from the sordid world into which her father's drunkenness places her, is worthy the art of a Bernhardt. "The Villian," a two reel Billy West comedy will also be shown. Monday, Alma Hamilton stars in "The Golden God." That ruthless pursuit of wealth is bound to bring unhappiness in its train is its theme.

NATIONAL BREAD ECONOMY

Our Annual Waste $20,000,000

By Ida C. Bailey Allen.

Editor Housewife Forum, Pictorial Review, author Mrs. Allen's Cook Book, lecturer Westfield Domestic Science Schools.

IT is indeed time for the American housewife to correct her "unpardonable fault of waste and extravagance." When that phrase of President Wilson's was first circulated through the country, the majority of housewives metaphorically shrugged their shoulders, and mentally, if not audibly said, "This denunciation does not apply to me."

This was not because the American woman was unwilling to curtail waste, but because material had been so reasonable and money so plentiful that the necessity for absolute conservation had never occurred to her, and she felt that her attempts at economy had already made her mistress of the situation.

Ida C. Allen

But in the meantime, even in the most thrifty households, a tremendous waste had been going on. It was in the form of leaks, a little here and a little there, that in themselves were apparently nothing, but that in the aggregate amounted to tons upon tons of weight and thousands upon thousands of dollars in value. In other words, the housewife has been so bound in by her own horizon that she has missed the vision of the concerted efforts of the combined women of our nation.

Now she must mobilize. A mighty army to conserve waste must be formed. The first and most important product to be conserved is wheat, that there may be bread for us, our children and the allied nations. Now there are many ways in which bread, and therefore wheat, may be conserved. The first method that has been discussed—that is the elimination of bread from the diet—can not be considered, because there is no one other food that has an equivalent place in the diet. This applies to plain white bread, whole wheat bread, rye bread, Boston brown bread, breads of all kinds, for each contains a certain amount of muscle-making material, a certain amount of energy, certain properties which feed the nerves and blood and others which store up reserve force in the form of fat.

Obviously, then, the lifting of bread from the daily menu should be the last resort, and will not be necessary, even in the poorest families, if it is treated as a food, not an accessory, and if the housewife will do everything in her power to save every crumb.

In most households the meal has been planned without regard to the food value of bread itself. This has been tacked on. For instance, a dinner that contains potatoes, cottage pudding and bread, has too much starch. The potatoes may be omitted, the bread and cottage pudding supplying all that is necessary. A supper that includes rice, bread and cake will be dietetically bettered by the elimination of either the rice or the cake, the bread furnishing the necessary constituents.

In other words, bread is, in spite of the present high prices, the most inexpensive food because it contains the largest amount of varied nutriment of any food that may be purchased, and because if combined properly into the menu, other foods, such as potatoes and rice which have been included through habit, may be eliminated. This means an actual saving in cash and at the same time an increase in family health, because the over-amount of starch, which has figured in our national menus will have been decreased. This means, in turn, less auto-intoxication, fewer sick headaches, less indigestion and fewer doctor's bills.

Bread and Cheese Pudding.

1½ cupfuls crumbled dry bread crusts, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoonful salt, few grains paprika, ⅛ teaspoonful pepper, 2 tablespoonfuls good oleomargarine, melted, 1 pint milk, 1½ cupfuls chopped American cheese.

Scald crumbs in milk; beat together the other ingredients. Pour over the hot milk, transfer to a buttered baking dish, set in a pan of hot water and bake until firm in a moderate oven.

Bread Savory.

6 onions, 3 cupfuls milk, 1½ cupfuls dried crumbled entire wheat bread crumbs, 2 tablespoonfuls ham fat, ½ cupful minced ham or smoked beef, 2 eggs slightly beaten, 1 teaspoonful salt, ⅛ teaspoonful pepper.

Slice the onions thin and cook till soft and yellow in the fat. Then add the other ingredients in the order given, pour into a baking dish, rubbed with a little ham fat, and cook gently until set.

PAIGE

The Most Beautiful Car in America

Protecting Paige Buyers

It is, and always has been, Paige policy to protect and conserve the interests of Paige buyers.

Contracts for large quantities of materials, entered into months ago, have enabled the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company to scale its present list prices so that in no instance has the increase exceeded $100. But when the present supply of materials is exhausted, there must inevitably be a readjustment of prices.

Paige prices are never fixed arbitrarily. The buyer is always permitted to share in the benefits resulting from foresight and good business judgment.

But price has never been the determining factor in the buyer's selection of a Paige car. He will continue to select the Paige independent of price figures.

The Paige wins the preference always because of mechanical excellenc, beauty and supreme quality.

HERE'S A NEW FISH.

Washington Bureau Recommends the Cod's Cousin of the Lakes.

The secretary of the department of commerce announces that the bureau of fisheries has discovered another new edible fish that in the past has been unjustly neglected. It is the burbet and is being advertised by the bureau of fisheries by illustrated cards, on which is printed a picture of the fish and this legend: "The cod's cousin from the great lakes—practically no waste. Ready to cook. Recommended by the United States bureau of fisheries."

The burbet flourishes in the great lakes and is plentiful there. The fish is known in some localities as the "eel pout" and "ceiling," and "ling" and "cusk." It is prepared for use by skinning instead of scaling. It has few bones, and the flesh is firm, white, flaky and of good flavor. It ships well. A bulletin for free distribution giving information regarding the fish and recipes for preparing it has been issued by the bureau.

Clips Are Useful.

Instead of basting long seams, use the little clips used by business men for holding papers. A few of them placed along a seam will hold the edges together while it is being stitched. Keep a box in the work basket for such uses.

THE SPIRIT OF THE GIFT.

The officers and men of Company D and the Hospital Corps of the Tenth Regiment have no doubt of the kindly interest and the anxious and solicitous care which the people of Connellsville and Fayette county generally have in their welfare and comfort as they go out to take their part in the greatest war of history.

Of the many expressions on part of the people of their sentiments toward the boys none have been quite so general in character as the raising of the Company Fund which was concluded by the exercises at the armory last night. The fund was conceived as a community testimonial in which everybody was privileged to take a part. No one individual or agency can or does take to himself or itself the credit for having either proposed or having carried the project to a successful and happy conclusion. It was made possible only by the hearty, willing and generous coöperation of all.

That such was the spirit prompting the gift makes it all the more worthy to have been given, and the more appreciated by those who will bear the donors in most kindly remembrance.

NO SLACKERS IN GARDEN ARMY.

Plainly there are no slackers among the members of the garden army at the coke plants of the Connellsville region. The revelations made to the judges who are making the annual inspections of the gardens at the plants of the H. C. Frick Coke company have been little short of amazing. Not only has more and closer attention been given to this activity among the workers, but a much larger number of persons have engaged in it and more extensive areas have been planted this year than in any previous year.

While this is one of the results of the intensive campaign of last spring to increase food production, it is also evidence of an awakening among the residents of the coke towns to the possibilities of utilizing the home production of food stuffs as the most practicable means of affecting a reduction in the high cost of living. Aside from these considerations the garden growing industry has a value both to the grower and his employe which cannot well be measured in the same terms which are applicable to its products.

Garden planting and tending has brought something into the lives of the coke plant workers which was in a certain sense very much needed. The work day at plants beginning at an early hour there is considerable time, after the day's run is over, which was largely unoccupied until gardening was taken up. These leisure hours are now being used in providing for the home needs, both during the growing season and for the winter months. This has not only an economic value to the gardners but it has done much to raise the standard of living. The larger benefits, however, arise from the promotion of a spirit of greater contentment among the employes. Their daily employment at the high rates of wages which have prevailed in the region satisfies in that respect, while the gardens serve to create a warmer attachment for their home surroundings than was experienced before they learned the art of gardening.

The disposition or habit to aimlessly drift about from plant to plant, which has been the custom of many mine and coke workers, gives way to a completer satisfaction. Better habits of industry result and the material prosperity of the individual worker is greatly increased.

The spirit of generously rivalry growing out of the garden growing contests has a wholesome effect. The contestants are stimulated to greater effort and application which finds reflection in their daily work as employes. It was a fortunate day for both the H. C. Frick Coke company and its employes when the home gardening campaign was undertaken. Both have profited by it and the whole coke region has felt the stimulus of this movement.

THE SEWERS AND KNITTERS.

There is a real inspiration in observing the earnestness with which people of all classes, who are imbued with a genuine spirit of patriotism, are engaged in the activities which are forming the "bit" of those who cannot take their places in the military or naval service. Of those so occupied in their spare moments none arouse a livelier interest among observers than the sewers of the Red Cross and knitters of the Navy League.

With a singleness of purpose and absorption which characterizes woman's way of doing things they are applying themselves to the work of these organizations with no thought other than to unselfishly do their part. The work of the ladies of the Red Cross being done at the headquarters of the chapters, is less observed by the public than is the work of the ladies of the Navy League, which can be seen everywhere.

"The girls are knitting like they do everything else—like mad," says the Pittsburg Gazette Times. "In the street cars and motors, in the reception rooms of the stores, on the park benches and at the movies; whenever they sit down for a few minutes they are at it. It is all expressive of their supreme optimism; knitting for the Navy being necessary, they have made it fashionable.

"Our girls, bless 'em, are nothing if not resourceful. They have the knack of making the necessary thing swagger and overnight they have everybody doing it. A row of them blissfully knitting compels the hope the war won't mar their bright outlook or strike home too cruelly. But if it does, they will be able to stand up; beneath their bright optimism is something grimly earnest."

It is fortunate for the H. C. Frick Coke company that some of the prize coal miners are not among the men entering the military service. It would take some lusty chunks to make up the difference between Uncle Sam's pay and the monthly earnings of the coal digging champions.

Simply counting the number of serial numbers in the master list will tell you your order number.

It has been the habit of Company D to make records. Setting the pace for other organizations in mustering in and in the low percentage of loss of men on physical tests it just kept pace with previous achievements.

Company D and the Hospital Corps are just a bit proud of their home town today. If you would ask any of the members how they feel about it.

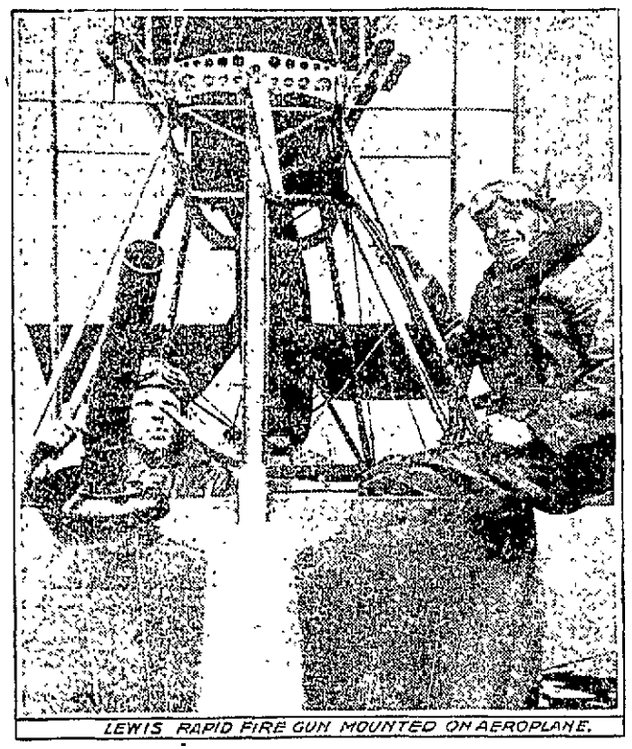

With the approval by the Senate military committee, of the resolution authorizing the drafting of aliens, the movement to remedy the grossest inequality of the draft regulations is making progress. Consideration of this measure should be an occasion for Congress to close to a patriotic discharge of duty without useless, delaying debate.

The high price of gasoline would seem to have added to its explosive qualities.

You simply cannot keep Connellsville boys from mixing in the big "doings" no matter where they take place. Few events of the war to date have taken place without the best City of Fayette having a "Johnny-on-the-Spot!"

Physical Examination of Persons to be Exempted by Local Boards.

All persons to whom notice of call is sent must report for physical examination. If they come within the classes the Local Board is authorized, upon proper proof of claim, to exempt they can file claim for exemption at the time they report for physical examination.

If any person called by a Local Board and notified to appear for physical examination, or another person in respect to such person, shall file claim for exemption on the ground that he is a subject of Germany, or that he is in the military or naval service of the United States, or a legislative, executive or judicial officer of the United States, or of any of the several states or territories or of the District of Columbia, or that he is a resident alien—that is, a citizen or subject of a foreign state or nation other than Germany and has not declared his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States—and the Local Board is of the opinion that there is reasonable ground for believing that such person is entitled to exemption on the ground claimed, the board may postpone the physical examination of such person until the claim for exemption shall have been heard.

If the Local Board denies the claim for exemption, immediate notice shall be given to such person to appear for examination not earlier than the fifth nor later than the seventh day after the mailing of the notice. Such notice will have the same force and effect as an original notice to appear for physical examination.

In the case of a person who in the opinion of the Local Board is a subject of Germany, the physical examination may be postponed until the board determines whether or not he is a subject of Germany as claimed, irrespective of whether or not he files a claim for exemption.

No examining physician shall participate in the physical examination or the reëxamination of any person who is related to such physician by blood or marriage nearer than a second cousin, nor shall any member of a Local Board participate in the physical examination or reëxamination, or pass upon the physical qualification for military service of any person who is related to such member of the board either by blood or marriage nearer than a second cousin.

VALUE IN DEAD LETTERS.

The Loss and Trouble That Are Caused by Sheer Carelessness.

More than two and a quarter million dollars' worth of checks, drafts, money orders and other valuable papers were found in undelivered letters by the dead letter office during the last year, and practically all were restored to their owners.

The first assistant postmaster general announces that the dead letter division handled 10,820,800 letters and parcels during the year, a slight increase over the previous year. One-third of these letters and parcels, or 3,677,194, was delivered, 101,485 contained things of value without clew to their senders and were held for claimants, 7,010,486 had to be destroyed and 41,775 still are being investigated.

In addition to the valuable papers, with a face value of $2,303,110, found in undelivered letters, many contained stamps, and some currency was found loose in the mails.

The dead mail received by the dead letter division during the year contained 677,700 misdirected letters, 115,706 unaddressed letters, 228,700 letters held for postage, 440,200 letters written on hotel letter paper by persons unknown to the hotels and 104,700 letters bearing fictitious signatures.

THE PEPLUM BLOUSE.

This Natty Garment For Comfort and Work.

To those whose need or habit it is to dress quickly the peplum blouse is a boon indeed, for no intricate adjustment and fastening of shirt and blouse and belt is required. In the matter of convenience the peplum blouse is in this respect on a par with the popular middy, yet having a trigness and smartness of style about it of which the middy blouse can make no boast.

Comfort, too, and ease and grace of movement are assured in these attractive blouses, and there are many different types developed in a variety of materials to suit the many occasions upon which they may be worn.

Pleasingly mannish and businesslike in appearance is the shirt blouse with peplum extension, having the bosom front and shaped sleeves finished with straight cuffs, following the lines of the regulation shirt worn by men.

Masculine Comfort.

A man once said that the things he looked for in a room were a comfortable chair, a strong writing table and a good light. That does not seem much for a man to want, but how many men get it? The girls and women of the household decorate and furnish their rooms to please themselves, but it is not often that very much thought or trouble is spent on the men's rooms. One reason that they don't think more about it is that as most men have these comforts at their offices they do not bother to voice their opinion about what they might have at home.

Every one who has a boarding house is rather anxious to rent the rooms to men, as they are proverbially less trouble and easier to please than women. How much more easily the rooms might attract men if they should bear in mind the three things this man said were essential to his happiness.

Army Aviation Service.

Significant, in view of the popular conception of flying as extreme daredevilry, is the record of the United States army aviation service from Jan. 1 to Dec. 26, 1916. During that period 7,087 flights were made by military pilots. In all 3,357 hours were spent in the air, which means that more than nine hours each day of the year some soldier airman was aloft. The distance traveled amounted to approximately 251,775 miles, or slightly more than ten times the circumference of the earth. There was no fatality. Evidently these figures cannot be fairly compared with current railroad and motorcar statistics. Contrasts are not needed, however, to accent their import. Sure flying is not yet accident proof and possibly never will be, but neither is it extremely foolhardy.—Searle Hendee in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Richard the Hunchback.

Of all the kings of England perhaps Richard, the hunchback, has the most sinister reputation, his only rival being the crafty John. He died on Bosworth field fighting for the crown he had gained by murder. It is a matter of history as well as of Shakespeare—not always the same thing—that the tide of success turned against Richard when Lord Stanley took himself and his men from his side to that of Richmond. When hard pressed Richard cried: "I am king of England! I will not budge an inch." Then, being overwhelmed, he died, crying: "Treason! Treason!"

Nation Comes to Rescue In Subscribing to Funds.

FRANCE NEEDS OUR HELP

Civilian Population in Reconquered Territory Left Absolutely Without Food or Homes by the Retreating Germans—Will Cost Over a Billion Dollars to Restore Their Homes.

The people of the United States showed their patriotism when they so greatly oversubscribed the Liberty loan. Likewise in the appeal for $100,000,000 for the Red Cross the people of this nation responded gallantly.

The Red Cross is the humanitarian side of warfare. It is just as necessary to have a good Red Cross organization as it is to have efficient fighting forces. In this connection the following statement made before the Red Cross chapters in Washington recently by Herbert C. Hoover, who has charge of the food supply of this country, is interesting:

"For nearly three years we had as one of our duties the care of the civilian population in northern France. We are, I think, the only Americans who have been in intimate contact or even in any contact with that imprisoned population. I think we are the only group who know of their suffering, of their misery, of their destruction, and who know of what confronts those people even after peace. We have always entertained the hope that possibly this or some other agency, some other organization, might be found that could bind up their wounds and take in hand their difficulties, rehabilitate them into a position again of self support.

"There is probably the greatest problem of all the war. There is an untold destruction of property, a total displacement of population, an enormous loss of human life, a loss of man power, a loss of animals, a loss of implements—a population of probably 3,000,000 of people totally and absolutely unable to get back on their feet without help.

"About the end of March the retreat of the German army over a small area opened up to the world a vision of what had really happened to the total of 3,000,000. It was but a little parcel in France that was recovered, with a population of only 30,000 people. But there was displayed the problem which confronts all of us partially today, but in a much greater measure at a later date.

"I had visited that area from behind the lines and again visited it from the allied side. I found that every village, with the exception of two small areas, had been utterly destroyed. The Germans had erected battering rams, had destroyed and burned villages, had leveled everything to the ground, had gathered up all the agriculture implements in open squares and burned them, had taken all animals and had removed all the male portion of the population between the ages of eighteen and sixty-five years.

"That is only one of the problems of France. That is but a sample of what we have to expect from practically the entire area. The cost of rehabilitation runs into figures which should startle all except Americans and perhaps Americans even in the large figures in which we have begun to think.

"I made a rough estimate of the immediate amount of money required to rehabilitate that little parcel of population. To support them for one year, to provide them with their implements, to give them the roughest kind of housing, to get them back to the point where they may get the land into cultivation and get into self support, would run somewhere from seven to ten millions of dollars. Altogether the north of France is probably faced with a total expenditure for rehabilitation which will run a billion and a half dollars.

"There is still a further field in France, and that is the children. The orphans of France increase day by day. That service is one which probably touches more nearly to the heart of every American than any other.

"The Red Cross is perhaps founded fundamentally for the care and comfort of soldiers, but we are not fighting this war alone for the direct efficiency of battle. We are fighting here for infinitely greater objectives, and there is no support that can be given to the American ideal, to the American objective of this war, better and greater than a proper organization of that side of our civilization which we believe is today imperiled. We are fighting against an enemy who had become dominated with a philosophy, with an idea for which there is no room in this world with us. It is a nation obsessed with the single idea that survival of the strong warrants any action, demands any submergence of the individual to the state, which justifies their mastery of the world.

"Our contention of civilization lies in the tempering of the struggle for existence by the care of the helpless. The survival of the strong, the development of the individual, must be tempered, or else we return 2,000 years in our civilization. While the Red Cross devotes itself to the strengthening of the strong, to the support of the soldier, it is a duty of the Red Cross to illume that part of American character and American ideal which stands for the care of the helpless."

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Shrub That Bears Fruit.

LUCK OF A SHEPHERD BOY.

What Happened to Him Because of a Kindly Act Performed—A Dream In the Forest and Its Wonderful Result. The Fairy of the Elder Bush.

Tonight, said Uncle Ben to Little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell you about

THE MAGIC FLUTE.

Possibly you do not know that the elder bush is a fairy plant. It grows in fairyland, and all the elderberry bushes, or elder trees, as they used to be called, are in the care of the elder mother, who watches over them, rewarding those who help and punishing those who harm her children, as she calls her elder bushes.

The fairy horns and all their musical instruments are carved out of elder wood. If you have ever made a whistle from the elder wood you will notice that it has a delightfully mellow tone.

And once there was a little boy who was wonderfully fond of music. At evening, when he took home the sheep he had all day been watching in the forest, he could only talk of the wonderful music that was to be heard there.

One day as he wandered by his favorite brook in the forest he noticed that one of the great bushes by the stream was broken.

"Poor thing! I'll tie it up," said the shepherd boy. He bound up the broken limb, and he thought a rustle passed through the plant.

One day the boy lost one of his sheep and after taking the rest of his flock home started back to the forest to seek it. After searching a long time he found it asleep under the elder bush which he had so carefully tended.

As it was very late and they were far from home, he curled down beside the sheep and went to sleep, and in his sleep he had a strange dream.

In this dream a lovely lady rose from the elder bush.

"I am the elder mother," she said. "You have served me and mine. Now we shall help you. Look well at this."

And she handed him a flute, at which he looked long and carefully.

"When you awaken make one of the same kind of the wood of the elder bush beneath which you sleep," she commanded.

The boy did as he was told, and, though he had never tried to make anything of the kind before, the minute he raised the flute to his lips he found it would play the most delightful music.

Just as he began to play the king went riding by and was so enchanted by the music that he asked the little boy to come with him to court and play for him every day.

And there the boy played all the songs which he had heard in the forest—the songs of the birds, the splashing of the waterfalls, the warble of the brook over the stones and the sighing of the wind through the trees—and the whole court praised him, and the little shepherd boy became rich and famous.

WOULD ADVANCE CLOCK AN HOUR

Marks Urges Adoption of Daylight Saving Plan.

ITS BIG SUCCESS IN EUROPE

Would Give People an Extra Hour to Work In Gardens and Increase Food Production—Economy In the Matter of Lights and Heat Would Also Result, It Is Claimed.

"The 'daylight saving' plan—namely, of turning the clock forward an hour during the five summer months from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in September—was first put into effect by Germany in the spring of 1916 as an emergency war measure. Immediately all of the other leading warring nations, except Austria, also adopted the plan, as well as Norway, Sweden, Holland and Denmark, on account of its great economic and other advantages," writes Marcus M. Marks, president of the borough of Manhattan and president of the National Daylight Saving association.

"Last year's trial in all of these countries resulted in such material benefits that not only all of the countries mentioned, but also Portugal, Australia, Iceland and Bermuda have enacted it for this year.

"In order to ascertain the exact results of the trial, the British parliament, the German reichstag and the legislative body of Holland appointed investigating committees, each of which reported favorable results and recommended its permanent adoption.

Has Great Economic Value.

"The plan is not only of great value in times of peace, but its economic advantages as a war measure are fourfold:

"Under the plan an extra hour of daylight in the late afternoon is afforded to every one, and it was found that a large majority, particularly of the working classes in England and Germany, utilized this hour for home gardening, resulting in an increased production of food.

"It is of the highest importance, as every one now realizes, that every step and measure should be taken to stimulate the cultivation of every possible parcel of ground for food purposes.

"In New York city alone there are at least 1,000,000 daily commuters, most of whom live in homes with grounds, a portion of which could be easily planted with vegetables. Under the present time conditions most of these commuters arrive at their homes at night just about the time the sun is setting, which prevents their spending any time in gardening unless they are unusually patriotic and ambitious enough to rise before time in the morning. Under the daylight saving plan practically all of them would have at least an hour of daylight after their homecoming, which they in this crisis would undoubtedly use or spend in their gardens. Thousands of plots would be tilled which had never produced food before. This would be true not only of New York city, but also of all our great cities, and literally several millions of people would enlist in the government's service, doing their bit daily in their home gardens.

"This is not a speculation. The experience of England and Germany proved that the extra hour of daylight was used for this purpose.

Saves Lighting Bills.

"The second great advantage of the plan in time of war is the great money saving in lighting bills. Under the new time arrangement every householder would save one hour daily in the consumption of gas or electricity or other means of illumination. It is estimated that in England $12,000,000 were saved in this connection. The city of Vienna alone saved $142,000, and it has been estimated by Robert L. Brunet, public service engineer of Providence, R. I., after a careful study that in the United States during the five summer months the sum of $10,000,000 would be saved in lighting bills.

"In England alone last year the saving in coal amounted to 260,000 tons, and a conservative estimate of the saving in the United States during the coming summer season is 1,000,000 tons.

"The committee which investigated the plan in Europe also reported that the general health of all, particularly the workers, was greatly benefited. Nine out of fourteen trade unions of England reported favorably on the plan, and social settlements stated that it was widely appreciated by working class families.

"The social life of the nation, too, would benefit. The hours for companionship among members of families would have greater value, and there would be more opportunity for cultivation of all the useful and desirable activities and interests which engage our attention outside our vocations.

"In order that victory over Germany may be assured to us and our allies it is highly desirable that we should cooperate with them in every possible way. The 'daylight saving' plan is in operation in every country of the allies. Our standards and methods of reckoning time should be uniform and in harmony with theirs.

"In the present emergency it is now up to congress to hurry its passage, with the knowledge that President Wilson, who has indorsed it, will give his executive approval."

Sally Lunn.

Sally Lunn can be baked either in a flat sheet or in muffin pans and is delicious in either form. To make it, sift together twice two cupfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Break two egg yolks into half a cupful of milk, mix and add to the dry ingredients. Then add half a cupful of melted butter and the whites of two eggs, beaten stiff.

ABOUT PATRIOTISM.

Christine Terhune Herrick of the Vigilantes Tells What It May Mean.

Patriotism means a lot to most of us when it is accompanied by a sort of grand stand play. We can all feel thrills and chokings in our throat at the sight of Old Glory borne up the street ahead of a brass band playing patriotic airs.

The time when we get over that and feel the hardships of a patriot is when we go home and plan for meals, or count up the change left after doing the day's marketing, or debate upon what we can afford to have for dinner. Then we shed our trailing robes of glory and begin to grumble like any unInspired creatures who have never cheered a flag or kept step to a martial tune.

"Why were we ever drawn into this wretched war?" we cry. "Look at the price of meat and vegetables! Do you know what I had to pay for my last bag of flour? It's a shame that the necessaries of life should be taxed like this! No, children! You cannot have cream on your strawberries, and I'm not sure I can afford to get the strawberries! Such a nuisance having to pinch and toss like this. I am sick to death of it!"

Just then and there you show that you don't know all patriotism can mean to a woman. Stop and think why everything is high priced, why you have to scrimp and strive. Here is where you have your chance to show your patriotism!

What are we doing as a nation? Why were we drawn into this war?

You may be able to answer promptly enough that we are working to support democracy and freedom against militarism and autocracy. But have you ever thought that the little economies that fret and harass you are your part of this big business?

It is very fine to wear a badge and join a canteen contingent or a Red Cross unit and trot about to meetings and hurrah for the flag. But if you do your "bit" in another way you are serving your country just as much, although in a smaller measure as if you volunteered for some spectacular service that kept you in the public eye.

Glorify your small renunciations and worries by calling them by their true names, sacrifices you are bearing for the sake of your country, in order that you may be able to do more for those who have infinitely less than you. Don't be afraid to say that it is patriotism which keeps you cheerful when you have to eat down here and pace off there and do without somewhere else. Tell your children that these minor privations, like the bigger ones borne by our brothers and sisters across the sea, are endured for freedom just as much as the trials of the pioneers from whom we are proud to trace our descent.

Hold your head high; remember that a hero is only one who does more than his duty and go about your daily round of work with the bearing and the heart of one who is qualifying to have a cross of war pinned to her kitchen apron!

Nature of Sleep.

Investigation by scientists of the nature of the sleep of persons in normal health shows that it varies according to the daily diet and the different hours at which sleep is begun. Altogether the ideal hour for retiring is 10 o'clock. The sleep of a person going to bed regularly at approximately this time gradually augments in intensity for the space of an hour. It then suddenly becomes very profound, reaching its maximum intensity at about 11:30 o'clock. Within five or six minutes from this time it has been found that the sleep begins to be less deep. In an hour the sleeper is again in the same condition of slumber as at about 11:15. From this time until after 2 o'clock the rest is steady and light. From 2 until 4 it augments, and then it consistently diminishes until it ceases at the customary time of rising.

M'GRAW PASSED UP EDDIE ROUSCH

HITTING AT A SAVAGE CLIP

Once Equaled Record For Getting to First Base After Laying Down Bunt. Often Gets Two Bases on Hits Which Ordinarily Look Like Singles.

John McGraw is conceded to be one of the smartest managers in baseball, and there is no doubt about his ability, but even Jawn boots one now and then.

Evidence tending to show that McGraw kicked one when he permitted Eddie Rousch to get away from the Giants in the deal which sent Matty to Cincinnati may be found in the batting and fielding averages of the National league. And when the base running returns are printed there is no doubt that this lanky young speed boy from Oakland City, Ind., will be numbered among the base runners who pile up the greatest number of thefts in a season.

Rousch became the property of the Giants through sale when the Federal league tossed the sponge into the ring and threw up its fins. He stuck with McGraw's team until the middle of July and was traded to the Cincinnati club with McKechnie and Mathewson for Buck Herzog.

McGraw couldn't see Rousch as compared to Davy Robertson, and Eddie was sent on his way. But today Rousch compares favorably with Davy as an all around ball player, and unless injuries keep him out of the game this season there is little doubt that he will top Robertson's best efforts in all around playing.

Rousch, though it is not generally known, is one of the speediest players in the two major leagues today. He is a Mercury in the outfield, and on the bases he runs like a deer. In a field meet during the life of the Federal league Rousch equaled the record for getting to first base after laying down a bunt. The record was made in 1908 by Shaw in St. Louis, and the time was three and one-fifth seconds. Rousch was clocked in the same time.

As a hitter Rousch has natural ability. He does not hit as hard as his former teammate, Benny Kauff, but he has a habit of banging the ball on a line past the infielders at a rate of about sixteen miles a minute, and he often gets two bases on hits on which the ordinary player would get no farther than first base.

Rousch's experience in baseball as a professional began in 1912 at Evansville, and he played with that club nearly two seasons. He was sold to the White Sox in July, 1913, for a price reported to have been $3,000 and later released to the Lincoln club of the Western league. In 1914 he refused to report to Lincoln, jumping to the Indianapolis Federals under Wilbur Bill Phillips, where he banged the pill for an average of .333 in seventy-four games. With the Newark Feds Rousch hit .298 in 1915, and in 1916 his hitting fell off to .267 in 108 games with New York and Cincinnati. But Rousch is just coming into his prime as a player, and he is only twenty-four years old. So it looks as though McGraw overlooked a bet when he traded him.

Order of Precedence.

In a narrow path, or whenever it is necessary for persons to pass others in single file, the man permits the woman to precede him. In this as in many other details of etiquette both the man and the woman should be informed as to their respective duties. Nothing is more embarrassing, for instance, at a muddy crossing than a mixup and delay occasioned by somebody's ignorance of this rule.

Gill—Yes, I know that.

"And do you know you have never paid me?"

"Why, yes, I know that."

"Do you know when you are going to pay me?"

"Well, say, you don't expect me to know everything, do you?"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

PUGILISTS' WINNINGS DO NOT LAST VERY LONG

MOST champions of the ring as soon as they have amassed a fair sized fortune by their fistic efforts glance around to see how they can spend it, and many of them spend it nearly as fast as it is made, which is some speed. Battling Nelson wrote a book and financed it. Then Bat tried a comeback in the ring. Jack O'Brien became a real estate operator and was not as good at it as he was at fighting. Joe Gans bought a hotel at Baltimore and died penniless. Jack Johnson squandered his coin in racing cars and such. Stanley Ketchel carpeted the pocketbooks of his pals with yellow backs. Horses ran away with the money Terry McGovern made with his fists.

HIS WIFE SAW HIM WIN AND LOSE RING TITLE

WHEN the lightweight championship was slipping from the nerveless hands of Freddie Welsh, while the title holder sprawled on the ropes in the Manhattan Casino, New York, his wife, who saw him win the title from Willie Ritchie, was a witness of his defeat. Although her heart was sore within her, she bore the humiliation bravely. She turned to George Monroe, who seconded her husband when he beat Ritchie, and said calmly:

"You saw him come and you saw him go, didn't you?"

Monroe declared that he had, and he recalled the night when Mrs. Welsh pushed through a throng of frantic Englishmen to her husband's side. She had been a witness of his sudden elevation, and she saw him go down before a better man.

Athletes are now helping to make Milwaukee famous. The home of Olympic winners is developing a new phenom in the athletic world. He is a schoolboy sprinter, who promises to become as fast as Howard Drew in his prime. The youngster's name is Spetz. In a recent high school competition in Milwaukee he sprinted the 220 yard dash in 22 1-5 seconds and the 440 yard event in 49 4-5 seconds, both of which are new state interscholastic records and remarkable feats for a boy who is yet in his teens.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Bride to Be.

WILLIAM'S inward state became chaotic.

He tried to smile carelessly to prove his composure, but he found that he had lost almost all control over his features. He had no knowledge of his actual expression except that it hurt him. In desperation he fell back upon hauteur. He managed to frown and walked proudly. At that they laughed the more. Wallace Banks rudely pointing again and again at William, and not till the oncoming sufferer reached a spot within twenty feet of these delighted people did he grasp the significance of Wallace's repeated gesture of pointing. Even then he understood only when the gesture was supplemented by half articulate shouts:

They Were Walking With Their "Stummicks Out of Joint."

"Behind you! Look behind you!"

The stung youth turned.

There, directly behind him, he beheld an exclusive little procession consisting of two damsels in single file, the first soiled with house moving, the second with apple sauce.

For greater caution they had removed their shoes, and each damsel as she paraded dangled from each far extended hand a shoe. And both damsels, whether beneath apple sauce or dust smudge, were suffused with the rapture of a great prokery.

They were walking with their "stummicks out o' joint."

At sight of William's face they squealed. They turned and ran. They got themselves out of sight.

Simultaneously the air filled with solid thunder and the pompous train shook the ground. Ah, woe's the word! This was the thing that meant to bear away the golden girl and honeysuckle of the world—meant to and would, not waiting one iron second!

Now a porter had her handbag.

Dear heaven, to be a porter—yes, a colored one! What of that now? Just to be a simple porter and journey with her to the far, strange pearl among cities whence she had come!

The gentle porter bowed her toward the steps of his car, but first she gave Flopit into the hands of May Parcher for a moment and whispered a word to Wallace Banks, then to Joe Bullitt, then to Johnnie Watson; then she ran to William.

She took his hand.

"Don't forget," she whispered—"don't forget Lola."

He stood stock still. His face was blank.

She hoisted May Parcher, kissed her devotedly; then, with Flopit once more under her arm, she ran and jumped upon the steps just as the train began to move. She stood there, on the lowest step, slowly gliding away from them, and in her eyes there was a sparkle of tears, left, it may be, from her laughter at poor William's pageant with Jane and Ramnie Kirsted, or, it may be, not.

She could not wave to her friends in answer to their gestures of farewell, for her arms were too full of Flopit and roses and candy and sweet peas, but she kept nodding to them in a way that showed them how much she thanked them for being sorry she was going and made it clear that she was sorry too and loved them all.

"Goodby!" she meant.

Faster she glided. The engine passed from sight round a curve beyond a culvert, but for a moment longer they could see the little figure upon the steps, and to the very last glimpse they had of her the small, golden head was still nodding "Goodby!" Then those steps whereon she stood passed in their turn beneath the culvert, and they saw her no more.

Lola Pratt was gone!

Wet eyed, her young hostess of the long summer turned away and stumbled against William. "Why, Willie Baxter!" she cried, blinking at him.

The last car of the train had rounded the curve and disappeared, but William was still waving farewell, not with his handkerchief, but with a symmetrical one pound parcel, wrapped in white tissue paper, girdled with blue ribbon.

"Never mind," said May Parcher. "Let's all walk uptown together and talk about her on the way, and we'll go by the express office, and you can send your candy to her by express, Willie."

In the smallish house which all summer long, from morning until late at night, had resounded with the voices of young people, echoing their songs, murmurous with their theories of love or vibrating with their glee, sometimes shaking all over during their more boisterous moods—in that house, now comparatively so vacant, the proprietor stood and breathed deep breaths.

"Hah!" he breathed sonorously. He gave himself several resounding slaps upon the chest, then went out to the porch and sat in a rocking chair near his wife. He spread himself out expansively. "My glory," he said, "I believe I'll take off my coat! I haven't had my coat off outside of my own room all summer. I believe I'll take a vacation! By George, I believe I'll stay home this afternoon!"

"That's nice," said Mrs. Parcher.

"Hah!" he said. "My glory, I believe I'll take off my shoes!"

And, meeting no objection, he proceeded to carry out this plan.

"Hah-ah!" he said and placed his stockinged feet upon the railing, where a number of vines, running upon strings, made a screen between the porch and the street. He lit a large cigar. "Well, well," he said, "that tastes good! If this keeps on I'll be in as good shape as I was last spring before you know it!" Leaning far back in the rocking chair, his hands behind his head, he smoked with fervor, but suddenly he jumped in a way which showed that his nerves were far from normal. His feet came to the floor with a thump, he jerked the cigar out of his mouth and turned a face of consternation upon his wife.

"What's the matter?"

"Suppose," said Mr. Parcher huskily—"suppose she missed her train!"

Mrs. Parcher shook her head.

"Think not?" he said brightening. "I ordered the livery stable to have a carriage here in lots of time."

"They did," said Mrs. Parcher severely; "about $5 worth."

"Well, I don't mind that," he returned, putting his feet up again. "After all, she was a mighty fine little girl in her way. The only trouble with me was that crowd of boys. Having to listen to them liked to kill me, and I believe if she'd stayed just one more day I'd been a goner!"

"Mr. Parcher!" a youthful voice repented.

He rose and, separating two of the vines which screened the end of the porch from the street, looked out. Two small maidens had paused upon the sidewalk and were peering over the picket fence.

"Mr. Parcher," said Jane as soon as his head appeared between the vines—"Mr. Parcher, Miss Pratt's gone. She's gone away on the cars."

"You think so?" he asked gravely.

"We saw her," said Jane. "Ramnie an' I were there. Willie was goin' to chase us, I guess, but we went in the baggage room behind trunks, an' we saw her go. She got on the cars, an' it went with her in it. Honest, she's gone away, Mr. Parcher."

Before speaking Mr. Parcher took a long look at this telepathic child. In his fond eyes she was a marvel and a darling.

"Well, thank you, Jane," he said.

Jane, however, had turned her head and was staring at the corner, which was out of his sight.

"Oo-oo-ooh!" she murmured.

"What's the trouble, Jane?"

"Willie!" she said. "It's Willie an' that Joe Bullitt an' Johnnie Watson an' Mr. Wallace Banks. They're with Miss May Parcher. They're comin' right here!"

Mr. Parcher gave forth a low moan and turned pathetically to his wife, but she cheered him with a laugh.

"They've only walked up from the station with May," she said. "They won't come in. You'll see!"

Relieved, Mr. Parcher turned again to speak to Jane, but she was not there. He caught but a glimpse of her, running up the street as fast as she could, hand in hand with her companion.

"Run, Ramnie, run!" panted Jane. "I got to get home an' tell mamma about it before Willie! I bet I ketch Hall Columbia, anyway, when he does get there!"

And in this she was not mistaken; she caught Hall Columbia. It lasted all afternoon.

It was still continuing after dinner that evening, when an oft repeated yodel, followed by a shrill wailed "June-ee! Oh, June-nee-ee!" brought her to an open window downstairs. In the early dusk she looked out upon the washed face of Ramnie Kirsted, who stood on the lawn below. "Come on out, Janie. Mamma says I can stay outdoors an' play till half past 8."

Jane shook her head. "I can't. I can't go outside the house till tomorrow. It's because we walked after Willie with our stummicks out o' joint."

"Why, Willie Baxter!" she cried, blinking at him.

"Can't you come out at all?" Ramnie urged. "Go ask your mother. Tell her"—

"How can I?" Jane inquired, with a little heat, "when she isn't here to ask? She's gone out to play cards, she and papa."

Ramnie swung her foot. "Well," she said, "I guess I had to find somep'n to do. G'night!"

With head bowed in thought she moved away. Jane, on her part, left the window and went to the open front door. Conscientiously, she did not cross the threshold, but restrained herself to looking out. On the steps of the porch sat William alone, his back toward the house.

"Willie," said Jane softly, and, as he made no response, she lifted her voice a little, "Will-ee!"

"Whutchwant!" he grunted, not moving.

"Willie, I told mamma I was sorry I made you feel so bad."

"All right!" he returned curtly.

"Well, when I had to go to bed, Willie," she said, "mamma told me because I made you feel bad I had to go upstairs by myself tonight."

She paused, seeming to hope that he would say something, but he spake not.

"Willie, I don't had to go for awhile yet, but when I do—maybe in about a half an hour—I wish you'd come stand at the foot of the stairs till I get up there. The light's lit upstairs, but down around here it's kind of dark."

He did not answer.

"Will you, Willie?"

"Oh, all right!" he said.

This contented her, and she seated herself so quietly upon the floor just inside the door that he ceased to be aware of her, thinking she had gone away. He sat staring vacantly into the darkness, which had come on with that abruptness which begins to be noticeable in September. His elbows were on his knees, and his body was sunk far forward in an attitude of desolation.

The small noises of the town—that town so empty tonight—fell upon his ears mockingly. It seemed to him incredible that so hollow a town could go about its nightly affairs just as usual. A man and a woman going by laughed loudly at something the man had said. The sound of their laughter was horrid to William. And from a great distance—from far out in the country—there came the faint, long drawn whistle of an engine.

That was the sorrowfulest sound of all to William. His lonely mind's eye sought the rusty spaces of the east—crossed prairie and river and hill to where a long train whizzed onward through the dark, farther and farther and farther away. William uttered a sigh so hoarse, so deep from the tombs, so prolonged, that Jane, who had been relaxing herself at full length upon the floor, sat up straight with a jerk. But she was wise enough not to speak.

Now the full moon came masquerading among the branches of the shade trees. It came in the likeness of an enormous football, gloriously orange. Gorgeously it rose higher, cleared the trees and resumed its wonted impersonation of a silver disk. Here was another mockery. What was the use of a moon now?

There came from a little distance down the street the sound of a young male voice, singing. It was not a musical voice, yet sufficiently loud, and it knew only a portion of the words and air it sought to render; but, upon completing the portion it did know, it instantly began again and sang that portion over and over with brightest patience. Thus:

"My countree, 'tis of thee
Sweet land of liber-tee,
My countree, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liber-tee,
My countree, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liber-tee,
My countree, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liber-tee,
My countree, 'tis"—

Jane spoke unconsciously. "It's Freddie," she said.

William leaped to his feet. This was something he could not bear. He made a bloodthirsty dash toward the gate, which the singer was passing.

"You get out o' here!" William roared.

The song stopped. Freddie Banks fled like a rag on the wind.

Now here is a strange matter.

The antique prophets prophesied successfully; they practiced with some ease that art since lost, but partly rediscovered by M. Maeterlinck, who proves to us that the future already exists, simultaneously with the present. Well, if his proofs be true, then at this very moment when William thought menacingly of Freddie Banks, the bright air of a happy June evening—an evening ordinarily reckoned ten years, nine months and twenty-one days in advance of this present sorrowful evening—the bright air of that happy June evening, so far in the future, was actually already trembling to a wedding march played upon a church organ, and this self same Freddie, with a white flower in his buttonhole and in every detail accoutred as a wedding usher, was an usher for this very William who now (as we ordinarily count time) threatened his person.

But for more miracles:

As William turned again to resume his meditations upon the steps his incredulous eyes fell upon a performance amazingly beyond fantasy and without parallel as a means to make scorn of him. Not ten feet from the porch, and in the white moonlight that made brilliant the path to the gate, Miss Mary Randolph Kirsted was walking. She was walking with insulting pomposity in her most pronounced semi-circular manner.

"You get out o' here!" she said in a voice as deep and hoarse as she could make it. "You get out o' here!"

Her intention was as plain as the moon. She was presenting in her own person a sketch of William, by this means expressing her opinion of him and avenging Jane.

"You get out o' here!" she croaked.

The shocking audacity took William's breath. He gasped.

"Why, you—you"— he cried. "You—you sooty faced little girl!"

In this fashion he directly addressed Miss Mary Randolph Kirsted for the first time in his life.

And that was the strangest thing of this strange evening, strangest because, as with life itself, there was nothing remarkable upon the surface of it. But if M. Maeterlinck has the right of the matter and if the bright air of that June evening, almost eleven years in the so called future, was indeed already trembling to "Lohengrin," then William stood with Johnnie Watson against a great bank of flowers at the door of a church aisle, that aisle was roped with white satin ribbons, and William and Johnnie were waiting for something important to happen. And then, to the strains of "Here Comes the Bride," it did—a stately, solemn, roseate, gentle young thing with bright eyes seeking through a veil for William's eyes.

Yes, if great M. Maeterlinck is right, it seems that William ought to have caught at least some eerie echo of that wedding march, however faint—some bars or strains adrift before their time upon the moonlight of this September night in his eighteenth year.

For there, beyond the possibility of any fate to intervene or of any later vague, fragmentary memory of even Miss Pratt to impair, there in that moonlight was his future before him.

He started forward furiously. "You—you—you little"—

But he paused, not wasting his breath upon the empty air.

His bride to be was gone.

THE END.

English Stallion Dead.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story That Is of Interest to Children.

A BOY WHO WAS VERY LAZY.

Stubborn Youth Who Was Careless About Study and Behind In His Lessons Gets a Surprise—After a Time He Is Cured of His Slothful Ways.

When I was a boy, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, we were taught to march, and that brings me to my story about a boy who WOULDN'T MARCH.

I hope you will always take an interest in the marching. Little Tommy, a boy I have heard about, did not care to march. He was fat and would rather sit still than run about.

Tommy's mother had told the teacher that he must take part in the marching or any exercises that might take some of the extra fat off his lazy bones.

So the teacher tried her best to get Tommy interested in marching. He was a new boy in her class.

But one morning when Tommy had missed a good many words in spelling and had not had the right answer to many of his arithmetic questions he was a bit sulky. Instead of blaming the mistakes on his own carelessness he was vexed with the teacher and cross with the children who had done their work right. It was very silly of Tommy.

And when the teacher threw up the windows and said, "Now the class will stand up, ready for the march," Tommy planted his feet stubbornly on the floor and settled back in his seat.

The teacher looked surprised when Tommy did not rise with the others. She said: "Tommy, please rise. You know we are going to march now."

But Tommy growled, "I don't want to march."

The little girl at the piano began playing the march. The other children stepped briskly around the room, and when the last child passed Tommy's desk the teacher was behind him. She whisked Tommy out of his seat and, with her hands upon his shoulders, pushed him into place and walked him around the room with the rest of the children.

At first Tommy was too taken back to object, but when he found himself being marched around the room against his will he squirmed and struggled so much that the rest of the children who had been trying to keep sober burst out laughing.

"Don't you think you could march by yourself now?" whispered the teacher, and Tommy murmured, "Yes."

With his eyes on the ground he tramped briskly after the other children, and from that day to this the teacher has had no trouble in getting Tommy to join in the marching.

Boy Scout Professorship.

In order to make the preparations of boy scout leaders and scout masters a regular feature of the curriculum of Teachers' college, New York city, the board of trustees accepted the offer made by Cleveland H. Dodge and Francis Phelps Dodge, presented through the Boy Scouts of America by the chief executive, James E. West, to maintain in Teachers' college for a certain number of years a provisional professorship in scouting and recreational leadership.

Shadow Tag.

This is a game to play when the sun shines. One person is chosen to be "it" and must run after the others. He does not have to tag them, however. He must only step on the shadow of one, calling that player's name at the same time. When he succeeds that player must change places with him.

FILLING OUT A CHECK.

It Is a Good Rule Always to Write the Stub First.

In a big store a woman was paying with a check for some goods she had just bought, and she was carefully filling in the stub of her check book first. "Oh, don't stop for that!" urged her shopping companion, who was in a hurry. "You can do that when you get home."

Unmoved, the careful woman finished the stub with special care, then wrote the check, gave it to the salesman and said to her impatient friend: "Before I was married I took care of some of my father's accounts. The first time he ever asked me to fill out a set of blank checks for him so he could sign them he told me: 'One rule you must always observe—write the stub first. Make a vow to yourself, like unto the vow of Jephthah, that you will never write a check until the stub is filled. If for any reason you should fail later to write the check it would be a simple matter to cancel the stub, but if you write a check and leave the stub blank you open the door to a hundred chances of mistake. No one's memory can be trusted on that subject. Never try to trust yours. Let the law of "the stub first" be to you as the law of the Medes and the Persians.' I have always found it perfectly easy to follow that rule, and that is one reason I have a bank account today. My husband is never afraid I will make him any trouble with it."

HEED BAD ODORS.

They May Warn You of Places Where Disease Germs Lurk.

Even a bad odor has its uses. Scientists say that the offensive smell which comes from decaying and disease breeding matter is in reality one of nature's measures of preparedness and of prevention.

Offensive odors indirectly prevent the spread of epidemics by calling attention to the breeding place of the disease. They give warning that something is wrong, and they persist in this warning by becoming more and more offensive until the wrong is righted.

The odor does not convey the germ or communicate the disease, because in most cases direct contact is necessary to do this, or the infection is communicated by some substance taken into or brought in contact with the body. But it does tell where the disease exists or is likely to exist. It also gives warning of tainted or unfit food, as the nose is intended by nature to be one of man's chief allies in the fight for health.

Some have even gone so far as to state that mothers should not discourage or forbid children smelling their food before they eat it. The tendency to do this is said to be a natural one. The nose is not placed above the mouth by accident. It was designed in primitive man as a guidepost for his stomach, and it is still a good guide.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

DIDN'T THINK QUICK ENOUGH.

How General Joffre's Aid Failed to Take Advantage of Situation.

Before introducing Lieutenant de Tessan, aid to General Joffre, and Colonel Fabry, the "Iron Devil of France," Chairman Spencer of the St. Louis committee entertaining the British mission told this anecdote:

"In Washington Lieutenant de Tessan was approached by a pretty American girl, who said:

"'And did you kill a German soldier?'

"'Yes,' he replied.

"'With what hand did you do it?' she inquired.

"'With this right hand,' he said.

"And then the pretty American girl seised his right hand and kissed it. Colonel Fabry stood near by. He strolled over and said to Lieutenant de Tessan:

"'Heavens, man, why didn't you tell her that you bit him to death?'"

Early Opportunity.

"We came to this country and took the innocent red man's land away from him."

A Beautiful Visitor.

There are several species of the woodpecker family, with which young people in the country and even the city are familiar. They are the flicker, the downy woodpecker and the red headed woodpecker. All are handsome birds, and they make a lot of noise pecking at the bark of trees and also cutting holes for nests. The bird pictured is a young red headed woodpecker, one of the handsomest of the tribe.

STOUT STYLES.

What Some Women Look Best In Just Now.

The outlook is not nearly so dark for the stout woman as it used to be. A great many kind souls in the world of manufacturers, tailors and designers seem to have taken pity on her, with the result that there are almost as many attractive styles for her now as there are for her slimmer sisters. At the summer fashion promenade in a prominent shop there were two models exploiting styles for stout women, and no thin woman viewing the fashion show dared to smile at the large ladies promenading up and down among the lissome and wand like creatures on whom Paris clothes were so truly Parisian, for very compassion of the appalled faces above comfortable double chins, the faces of women who perhaps for the first time saw themselves as others see them. No stout woman dreams how she actually looks, and it is rather an unpleasant shock to find how very stout some other woman appears in the gown she has her eye on. Stout women look over the fashion magazines and imagine themselves in a fancied costume, and they never imagine themselves quite as stout as their dressmakers know they are. Perhaps they are happier, not knowing—at any rate one feels sure that after seeing the gown of their dreams on another figure of equal or superior avoirdupois they will pass up the model in favor of something else to which their fancy may still cling with dreams.

There are several things, however, that the stout woman has learned—not to select models of stiff, glistening fabric, not to choose overtrimmed bodice or skirts with ruffles. Draperies are the things for the stout figure, soft draperies that fall in long lines. Chiffon is an ideal fabric and crepe de chine with its clinging texture and richness without the luster of satin. Soutache braiding makes an admirable trimming when applied in long lines and panels; buttons also—when they are not too glittering. The stout woman has often a very pretty foot and ankle and should make the most of dainty footwear, for there are all the smart and attractive styles in buttoned boots and slippers, and in this field of fashion may she glean to heart's content.

RICE FIELDS OF JAPAN.

Mostly Tiny Gardens, but They Feed 60,000,000 People.

Almost one half of the land capable of cultivation in Japan is planted in rice. Handkerchief gardens would perhaps best describe the little rice fields, many of which are no larger than a tennis court, are equally flat and are surrounded by rims of earth to hold the water when the fields are flooded. The average rice field in Japan is about one acre and a half in size; but, large or small, each field must be leveled, and each must have its rim or dike. Then there must be a system of canals to bring water to the fields and another system of ditches to take it away when it is no longer needed.

If the land were fairly level the preparation of the ground, which is all done by hand, would not be so hard nor would it require such vast amounts of human labor, but Japan is a mountainous country. Terraces must be cut from the steep hillsides and so leveled that they will hold the water at a uniform depth over the small fields.

It is said that there are 12,000 square miles of rice land in Japan, the greater part of which has been prepared with an almost infinite amount of labor. That area of land cultivated in rice virtually feeds a nation of 60,000,000 people.

The little fields are usually permanent, and frequently a farmer owns three or four scattered fields. That further increases the work of caring for his crops. In recent years, however, the government has tried to consolidate the holdings of farmers by a process of land exchange.—Youth's Companion.

SASH WINDOWS.

Probably a Dutch Invention of the Seventeenth Century.

The history of sash windows is somewhat obscure, but the probability is that they were a Dutch invention and that they were introduced into England soon after the revolution of 1688. The derivation of the word "sash" in this sense is the Dutch "sas," a sluice—old English "sasse." In Queen Anne's reign they were yet so comparatively uncommon as to be mentioned as a special feature of houses that were advertised as "to let." In the Tatler, for instance, May 27-30, 1710, there is this advertisement:

"To be lett, in Devonshire Square, near Bishopsgate, a very good Brick House of 3 Rooms of a Floor, and a good Hall, with very good light and dark Closets, the whole House being well wainscoted and sash'd with 30 Sash Lights."

From England they passed into France, where the first to put them up was Marshal de Lorge at his new house at Montmartre. Speaking of this, Lister in 1699 writes in his "Journey to Paris:" "We had the good fortune here to find the marshal himself. He showed us his great sash windows, how easily they might be lifted up and down and stood at any height, which contrivance, he said, he had out of England."—London Standard.

Trapping Turtles.

In the old days in the south the negro fishermen used to have an ingenious and simple way of trapping fresh water turtles. Any boy today can use the same method with the same effect. Turtles have favorite sunning logs. Beside one of the logs sink a water tight box two feet long and a foot and a half wide. The open top of the box should stand about an inch above the water. Nail the box securely against the log in such a position that it will catch the turtles that fall from the log. After the trap has been set leave the pond or lake for a time. On returning approach the log quietly from the side opposite the box. If there are any turtles on the log, frighten them suddenly. They will pitch off hurriedly into the box.—Youth's Companion.

Frocks of Colored Linen.

Frocks of colored handkerchief linen, elaborately run with hand tuckings and plaits with panels of fillet lace, at times dyed in self coloring, are being worn by smart women at Palm Beach. White batiste is elaborately ornamented with soutache embroidery, with medallions of ecru lace forming the deep border on skirt or sectional panels.

White and colored organdie dresses are trimmed with bandings of organdie embroidered—the same introduced in the Russian blouse or surplice draped waist. In chemise dresses of oyster white linen crush the full length panel of applique embroidery, deep sailor collars and cuffs are the distinguishing features. Broad belts of white, tan or gray suede usually confine the waist.

Stuffed Spareribs.

Two pounds of spare ribs, a pound prunes, a pound sour apples, one-quarter cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful cracker crumbs. Wash, pick over and soak prunes over night in enough cold water to cover.

In the morning stew gently for fifteen or twenty minutes or until soft when pierced with a wooden skewer or a needle kept for cooking purposes only. Chop apples finely, add sugar and cracker crumbs and mix thoroughly together.

Sew the spareribs together so that they form a pocket. Stuff with the mixture. Place the ribs in a pan, add prune juice and bake one hour.

A Queen Who Resigned.

One queen who got tired of ruling over her nation and resigned was Queen Christina, daughter of the great Gustavus Adolphus II. of Sweden, whom she succeeded in 1632. Growing tired of reigning at the age of twenty-eight, she passed the crown over to her cousin, Charles Gustavus, and went to Rome, which city she is said to have entered in the costume of an amazon. Later she tried to regain her throne, but failed. She died at Rome in 1689.

COLLEGIANS TAKE B. & O. INTO CAMP BY A SCORE OF 7 TO 2

Dick Guy's Nine Finds Local Stars Rather Easy Picking; Errors Many.

Dick Guy's Pittsburg Collegians, fresh from a successful trip through West Virginia, stopped over here yes- Smoky City outfit. The Baltimore & Ohio team by a score of 7 to 2, this being the ninth straight win for the Smoky City outfit. The Baltimore & Ohio boys showed evidence of lack of practice, three runs being presented to the Collegians. However, the latter bunched enough hits in two innings to win, without any assistance on the part of the locals. Both teams developed a preference for wild throws, corrupt heaves being responsible for four runs.

With two down in the first, Sandomire singled and went to third when Stillwagon threw the ball away to catch him stealing. A passed ball scored him. Sandomire singled again in the fourth, Bell tripled and Ray doubled. Another wild throw cropped up at this point and the third run came over. Bell's single, a walk and Steinbrenner's double with two more consumptive pegs, put three more Collegians over in the sixth.

In Connellsville's half, Danley's single and Pennington's muff of Getsle's fly, after a hard run, put two on. The Collegians' signs got crossed at this point and Ridge's peg to catch Danley at third got by unmolested, Danley scoring. Getsle tried to do likewise, but a good peg from Pennington nailed him by yards.

Another was added in the eighth when Francis singled and was forced at second by Danley. Getsle and Fisher hit for two bases putting Danley over the plate.

Danley was not in the best of form and was touched up harder than usual, while Strobel, the Collegian's forkhander, while he didn't appear to have much, used his head all through the game and the locals were unable to get to him.

Another game has been arranged between the same teams here August 11, when the locals expect to give a better account of themselves.

MURDERER INSANE

Man Who Killed Doctor's Wife and Himself Had Acted Peculiarly.

By Associated Press

DERRY, Pa., July 27.—That Mrs. S. P. Boyer, wife of Dr. Boyer, who was shot to death in her home last night by E. R. Goodwin of Pittsburg was the victim of an insane man was the opinion expressed today by Deputy Coroner J. M. Nicholson, who investigated the case. Goodwin, after shooting Mrs. Boyer, killed himself.

The coroner's investigation showed that Goodwin who was a salesman for a Pittsburg construction company, had been acting peculiarly and drinking heavily of a soft drink which affects the nerves and heart.

QUIET IN CHESTER.

Order Restored After Race Rioting in which Two Were Killed.

By Associated Press.

CHESTER, July 27.—With armed guards patrolling a large area of the city, quiet was restored here early today after another outbreak of race rioting which exacted a toll of two lives and caused injury to scores of persons both white and colored. The authorities were at first unable to cope with the situation when rioting was resumed last night after a quiet day following the disorders of Wednesday, but with the assistance of national guardsmen, state police and 500 special deputies, the streets were cleared and order was restored shortly after midnight.

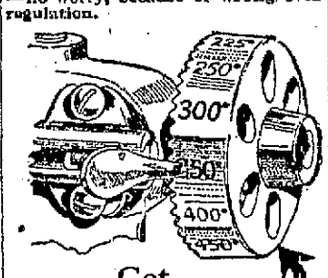

The negro section was roped off and surrounded with a patrol, and guards were stationed to prevent other outbreaks. All saloons and amusement places were ordered closed by Mayor McDowell.

While the riots were the direct result of the killing by negroes of William McKinney, a young white man, officials declare the importation of a large number of negro laborers from the South had previously caused much ill feeling.

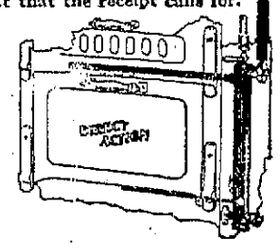

Rioting was renewed at the noon hour today and a negro, Frank Meadows, who was attacked while passing the Chester Shipbuilding company's plant, may die. Meadows ran from a group of workmen and two bullets were fired at him.
